

Legacy Roofing Named One of Washington State's Fastest Growing Private Companies for Third Consecutive Year

Redmond company is recognized on both local and national lists in 2007.

REDMOND, Wash. (Oct. 22, 2007) – Legacy Roofing, a Redmond, Wash.-based roofing installation company, has been named the 72nd fastest growing privately held company in Washington State by The Puget Sound Business Journal. The company held the 65th spot on the same list in 2006 and was number 90 in 2005.

“Making the list for the third straight year is a real testament to our company’s Gold Standard of quality and customer service,” said Cliff Hurn, Legacy Roofing’s founder and CEO. “All our employees are committed to operating by the highest standards of service from the first sales call to the final inspection.”

Every year the PSBJ creates its list of the top 100 fastest growing private companies in Washington State. The list takes into account a company’s revenue numbers for the past three years to determine placement. Companies must have recorded revenue of $200,000 or more in the first of the three years being reviewed, and the company CEO or executive has to attest to, and personally vouch for, the growth of the company.

This latest honor for Legacy Roofing comes just a few months after the company announced its inclusion on Inc. Magazine’s list of the 5,000 fastest growing companies nationwide. The Bellevue Chamber of Commerce also named the company one of three finalists for the 2007 Eastside Business of the Year award earlier this year.

Legacy Roofing’s sales nearly quadrupled between 2003 and 2006, with an overall increase in revenue of 168 percent. It closed 2006 with $24 million in sales and has continued its impressive growth throughout the current year.

The company began as a contractor serving new construction builders in 1988 and expanded in 1992 to include residential roof removal and replacement. Legacy also added a home improvement division in the 1990s that focuses on roofing-related carpentry. Legacy Gutter Services, launched in November 2005, is the latest addition to the Legacy Roofing family of companies.
